UOttawa alumnus Alex Trebek returned to the capital Thursday, where he was honoured for his dedication to the popularization of geography. Trebek said he loves seeing the different societies he's read about. "I've always had a warm spot in my heart for geography," he said. Travelling is important because it teaches people about different cultures, he added. "If you learn about a culture, it helps you understand."

Prentice calls it quits

▶ Opposition MPs suggest Prentice was fed up being stuck in a powerless portfolio ▶ Environment activists buffeted Harper government, Prentice in particular

Jim Prentice's surprise resignation has dealt another blow to the Harper government's battered environmental agenda.

The environment minister announced Thursday that he's quitting politics to take a plum job as a vice-chairman of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

The move came just two days after a Republican rout in the U.S. mid-term elections left Prentice at the helm of a ministry whose biggest file has effectively been shelved.

The Conservatives have hitched their policy on reducing greenhouse-gas emissions to that of the Obama administration in Washington, arguing a continental approach is required given the two countries' tight trading relationship. But after the mid-terms, any expectation of American movement on the file has been all but eliminated for the next two years.

With the United States back to the drawing board on its climate legislation, it appeared Prentice would be left with little to do. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Future of Remembrance conference focused on passing on memories of war to next generation

JOE LOFARO
OTTAWA@METRONEWS.CA

Educators today have gotten better at teaching students about Canadian history, a military veteran who served during the Cold War said at the Canadian War Museum Thursday.

"Over the last few years, they've done a lot to talk about World War I, World War II in the school curriculum," said Bill Campbell, who served with the mechanical and electrical engineers in Canada's NATO brigade in northern Germany.

That education continued Thursday as war veterans and high school students gathered at the war museum to share stories and outlooks during the Look to the Future of Remembrance conference.

"They bring kids by the busload here and take them through the museum. This museum is a wonderful addition to our educational landscape because it's not just about war ... Canada's history is right here in this museum."

Media personality Peter Mansbridge was the keynote speaker of the conference and shared his stories about attending reunions with Second World War veterans in the Netherlands over the years.

"They've never forgotten; nor should we," said Mansbridge.

Ian Lockhart, a senior student from John McCrae Secondary School, told the crowd of about 200 people that "it is up to the youth" to help other generations remember and understand the memories of our veterans.

'Meaningful' exhibition is what it is

Exhibit includes a variety of media, including video, drawing, painting, photography and sculpture

TRACEY TONG
@METRONEWS.CA

More than 80 works by artists across Canada will make up what National Gallery of Canada director Marc Mayer called "probably the most meaningful exhibition we're going to do this year."

The gallery's inaugural biennial exhibition, It Is What It Is: Recent Acquisitions of New Canadian Art, "is important to us because one of our central activities is the collecting of Canadian contemporary art," Mayer said Thursday.

Dates

- The exhibit starts Friday and runs through April 24.

The exhibition brings together works that were acquired in the last two years and include pieces from the NGC's collections of Indigenous and contemporary art, as well as pieces from the Canadian Museum of Canadian Contemporary Photography.

It Is What it Is "provides an excellent reference point for understanding the creative spirit that flourishes in our country today," said Mayer.

Finding a title for the exhibit was challenging, due to the non-thematic nature of the works, said curator of contemporary art Josée Drouin-Brisebois.

"Every title that we put on the show seemed to qualify it too much," she said. "So I looked at one of the works in the exhibition, by Ron Terada, and it was called It Is What It Is: It Was What It Was.

"It's a pretty good analogy for this exhibition."

Conference takes fight to anti-Semitism

The subject of anti-Semitism will be front and centre next week in Ottawa as representatives from close to 50 countries will meet to explore data and exchange practices on the topic.

The Inter-Parliamentary Coalition for Combating Anti-Semitism (ICCA) will hold its second annual conference Sunday through Tuesday on Parliament Hill.

"Anti-Semitism is the oldest and more enduring of hatreds — 'a lethal obsession' as it has been called — which has caused untold catastrophes," said MP Irwin Cotler, co-founder and chair of the ICCA. "We ignore anti-Semitism at our peril.

"I'm very excited about the parliamentary and experts forum that will talk about anti-Semitism, hatred and racism," added Cotler. "The representatives from Africa and South Africa should be very interesting to listen to."

Local MPP pushes to make Nov. 11 a holiday

Nepean-Carleton MPP Lisa MacLeod called on the Ontario legislature today to honour those who have sacrificed their lives in military service by making Remembrance Day a statutory holiday in Ontario.

The province is one of the few Canadian provinces and territories not to recognize Remembrance Day as a statutory holiday. "Canadian veterans, soldiers and our war dead have done their part for freedom and democracy. Now it is up to us to enshrine in law a statutory holiday," said MacLeod.

A helping hand for young moms looking for work

Youth Services Bureau, Youville Centre and federal government team up to give mothers opportunity

MIKE BEASLEY
OTTAWA@METRONEWS.CA

Young mothers facing the challenge of raising children, developing their job skills and finding meaningful employment now have a program that will allow them to get through any barriers they may encounter.

An new plan to help a group of 12 Ottawa mothers succeed as parents and employees was officially launched on Thursday by the Youth Services Bureau of Ottawa and the Youville Centre.

The unveiling of the Young Parent Employment Program (YPEP) was held at the Youville Centre on Mann Avenue with Ottawa-West Nepean MP John Baird making the announcement.

"Our government is proud to invest $182,000 into this program and hope that it makes a huge impact in their lives," Baird said.

The dozen women recently began a series of hands-on workshops and 16 weeks of on-the-job work experience with the goal of increasing their chances of supporting themselves and their families.

"Being involved in a program like this is an absolute blessing," said Amanda, a program participant. "It is geared towards balancing the demands of parenthood and daycare while still being able to improve my job skills and find a great job."

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED FOR DEPRESSION RESEARCH

Psychiatrists at the Ottawa Psychopharmacology Clinic are currently conducting a research study of an investigational medication for depression. The purpose of the study is to further our knowledge about the possible treatment of depression. Study duration is initially 12 weeks with possible continuation of up to 24 weeks in total. Included are a physical exam, blood tests and a psychiatric interview. All information provided will be treated in strictest confidence. To volunteer, you must be 18-65 years of age, not currently in psychiatric treatment (unless you are being referred by your treating doctor), have no drug or alcohol problems and be in generally good physical health.

Ottawa brothers come out on top

Amazing Race-style competition pushes teams to their limits

JOE LOFARO
OTTAWA@METRONEWS.CA

After 36 hours of tough challenges in chilling temperatures, two Kanata-raised brothers won the Mitsubishi City Chase Championship last weekend.

Their secret? "Just not taking it too seriously and enjoy the ride," said Anthony Woods Thursday.

Representing Team Ottawa, Erik and Anthony Woods were first to cross the finish line in Winnipeg after beating out seven regional teams for the grand prize of two new Mitsubishi Outlanders.

The brothers had to check in at different Chase Points across the city in order to complete their next challenges, including tugging a car for about 2.7 kilometres and eating a nine-pound hamburger.

"Eating the burger was almost impossible, and pretty gross," said Anthony, who works as a consultant. "I do this partly to be with my brother because he's in a different city," said Erik. "It gives me a reason to do something with him every year."

HUNGARY DIGS

Cleanup work continues with trucks carrying tons of red mud to reservoirs

A month after a flood of red sludge devastated Kolontar, this town in western Hungary is struggling to overcome its deep scars.

While work crews use heavy machinery to dredge up and cart away the caustic ochre muck that once coated the town, residents are trying to heal less visible damage and figure out what lies ahead for them.

Katalin Holczer, her husband Balazs and their two children plan to pull up stakes and create a new life somewhere else. She said they were too traumatized by the Oct. 4 torrent of sludge from a burst factory reservoir that damaged their home beyond repair and left her legs scarred with chemical burns.

"My younger son, who was with me in the house when the flood hit, still screams 'It's not coming in here!' in his sleep," she said.

Others hope for the return of a normal life here, even if their houses were left a write-off by the disaster.

"My children say my sense of humour is coming back, which is half the battle," Erzsebet Veingartner said Wednesday as she watched her two young granddaughters, a month after fleeing her badly damaged home.

"The advice I've been getting is to not look back, look only forward, and keep in mind that I'm still alive," she added.

Such optimism was hard to find just four weeks ago, when parts of Kolontar and the neighbouring towns of Devecser and Somlovasarhely were inundated by 700,000 cubic metres of burning industrial waste.

The waist-deep sludge flooded streets and swept through living rooms before spilling into creeks leading into the Danube, Europe's second-longest river.

Nine people were killed and dozens more hospitalized. Government officials and environmental groups described the spill as Hungary's worst environmental catastrophe.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Plans

Officials said the long-term plan was to restore the area to its pre-flood state by removing contaminated layers of soil from nearly 1,000 hectares (2,500 acres) of residential and agricultural land.

- Rebuilding "The aim is total rehabilitation," said Timea Petroczi, a spokeswoman for the Disaster Management Agency.
- Demolition Still, about 100 of Kolontar's 800 residents expect their homes to be bulldozed, leaving many facing tough decisions. Should they accept compensation from the state or the company deemed responsible without clear figures from either? Should they rebuild? Should they go?

▶ Villagers carry a women as they flee their homes following another eruption of Mount Merapi in Klaten, Indonesia.

Merapi death toll hits 44

Eruptions at Indonesia's deadly volcano appeared to be intensifying Thursday as towering clouds of ash shot from the crater with a thunder-like roar, dusting towns up to 250 kilometres away and forcing motorists to switch on their headlights during the day.

The death toll climbed to 44 — with six more lives recorded in the last 24 hours — and the government repeated orders to airlines to stay clear of the unpredictable mountain.

Mount Merapi, which means "Fire Mountain," is one of the world's most active volcanoes.

But even those who have dedicated a lifetime to studying it have been baffled by its erratic behaviour since its first Oct. 26 eruption, which has been followed by more than a dozen other powerful blasts and thousands of volcanic tremors.

They'd earlier hoped that would result in a long, slow release of energy.

"But we have no idea what to expect now," said Surono, a state volcanologist, adding that he has never seen the needle on Merapi's seismograph working with such intensity. The fear is that a new lava dome forming in the mouth of the crater will collapse, triggering a deadly surge of 1,000 Celsius ash and gas — known to experts as pyroclastic flows — at speeds of 100 kilometres per hour.

Houses in the condemned area, now a virtual ghost town, where a memorial park is planned, looked eerily similar to how they appeared nearly a month ago.

Many windows and doors had been removed by owners hoping to use them again. Large piles of stained, ruined possessions rose outside more than two dozen homes, with sneakers, tools and appliances strewn among twisted metal fences and other debris.

Only an egg packing plant, which sits on higher ground, was still functioning among the neighbourhood's empty buildings.

Philanthropy couple causes media stir

Nova Scotia woman diagnosed with cancer and her husband donate almost all of a $11.2M lottery win

MICHAEL GORMAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Allen and Violet Large

The phone hasn't stopped ringing at Allen and Violet Large's home over news the elderly Nova Scotia couple has given away almost $11.2 million in lottery winnings.

Allen Large said they've been overwhelmed by calls from across the country since a story about their philanthropy appeared in the Halifax Chronicle Herald Thursday.

"We're not used to all this attention," Large said as he fielded another call at the couple's modest home in Lower Truro.

"We're just plain, old country folks."

The Larges won their fortune in a July 14 Lotto 6-49 draw and decided to give almost all of it away.

After taking care of their family, the couple donated money to area churches, fire departments, cemeteries, the Red Cross and hospitals where Violet, who has cancer, has undergone treatment.

Large, a 75-year-old retired welder, said they gave away 98 per cent of their winnings and banked the remaining two per cent "for a rainy day."

Word of the couple's astounding generosity has drawn interest abroad.

A producer with ITV television in London called The Canadian Press Thursday looking to connect with the Larges, and the story drew a flood of comments from readers on the Daily Mail's website in the United Kingdom.

Budget leaves MPs 'staggering'

Toronto's police chief says he expects to come in under budget on his portion of security for the G20 Summit, but that doesn't impress some MPs still stunned by the size it.

William Blair told a House of Commons committee Thursday that he budgeted $124.8 million to keep Toronto streets safe during the June summit. A big portion of that was to fly in, accommodate and pay about 2,000 cops from across the country. He noted most had to be paid at a "premium" rate because officers were called in from leave or off days.

"We're reeling, we're staggering to understand how you can spend that amount of money," said New Democrat MP Pat Martin.

Tories want to throw the book at sex predators

New plan for minimum sentences, not house arrest

Victims of childhood sexual abuse are applauding a proposed bill to create mandatory sentences for sexual predators.

The law would see perpetrators behind bars instead of under house arrest.

Justice Minister Rob Nicholson laid out the details of the Conservative government's proposal for tougher sentencing on Thursday in Toronto.

"It will ensure that child sexual offenders receive sentences that better reflect the seriousness of their crimes," said Nicholson.

Victims' rights organizations said they welcomed any change to sentencing rules, adding that for too long offenders have walked away from heinous abuse with just a slap on the wrist.

"What it's saying to victims is, 'We're listening, we care, you matter,' and they're not treating it lightly," said Ellen Campbell, a survivor of childhood sexual abuse and the executive director of the Canadian Centre for Abuse Awareness.

Campbell also said victims are reluctant to report abuse, because they realize the punishment doesn't fit the crime.

"I'm like most survivors. I didn't come forward until I was in my 40s," said Campbell, adding that by the time she spoke out, her abuser had likely died.

The crackdown

- The bill, tabled in Ottawa, would establish mandatory prison sentences for seven existing Criminal Code offences, including luring a child, sexual assault and aggravated assault.
- Conditional sentences such as house arrest would no longer be available.
- It would be illegal for anyone to provide sexually explicit material to a child for the purpose of committing a sexual offence, also known as "grooming."

Doomed by mom's illness?

It was a "recipe for disaster" when a mentally ill single mother was released from a psychiatric ward with little more than a prescription and sent home alone to care for the two daughters she would later drown, the woman's lawyer told a court in Barrie, Ont., Thursday. Elaine Campione believed she was being followed by people trying to kill her and claimed she saw aliens, the court was told. Campione is charged with first-degree murder in the deaths of the girls — Serena, 3, and Sophia, 19 months.

More food inspectors needed, union says

The union representing federal food inspectors says Canadians aren't any safer now than they were during the deadly listeriosis outbreak two years ago.

That's because the Tory government still hasn't implemented all 57 recommendations made by an independent investigator, the union says.

It claims there are fewer inspectors working in meat plants now than before the outbreak.

But the Canadian Food Inspection Agency says in fact there are more inspection staff than ever.

Tribute loses lustre for dad

New lakes, named after fallen soldiers, are about 120 kilometres southwest of the northern mining city of Thompson, Man.

Manitoba has named five lakes after soldiers killed in Afghanistan, but one man's father says standing in line behind an NHL hockey player takes the lustre off the honour.

Raymond Arnal thanked the province Thursday after a ceremony at the legislature naming the lake after his son, Cpl. James Arnal, who was killed in 2008.

But he said the fact that NHL star Jonathan Toews had one named after him this past summer takes away some of the significance.

"On the one hand, I'd like to say how appreciative I am that the government is honouring the memory of my son James and others in such a special ceremony," Arnal read from a brief statement after the ceremony.

HANDOUT/THE CANADIAN PRESS

"Although (Jonathan Toews) may be a super sports star he is not, in my humble opinion, a hero, at least not in the same category as the heroes we are honouring here today, and as such should not have been given the same recognition."

RAYMOND ARNAL, FATHER OF JAMES ARNAL, PICTURED

"Knowing that his supreme sacrifice has now been recognized and acknowledged by the Manitoba government gives me a great source of pride and joy."

But Arnal also said he had to voice his disappointment that Toews has had a lake named in his honour. Manitobans who die in war are entitled to have a geographic feature such as a lake or hill named after them, although there are no rules which say lakes must only be named only after fallen soldiers. About 4,200 former service personnel have already received such recognition. The province has said no slight was intended by naming a lake after Toews, a Stanley Cup winner with Chicago.

Airbus's A380 fleet grounded

Qantas grounded its Airbus A380 fleet after one of the superjumbo jets blew out an engine Thursday, shooting flames and raining metal chunks before making an emergency landing in Singapore with 459 people aboard.

It was the most serious midair incident involving the double-decker A380, the world's largest and latest airliner, since it debuted in October 2007 with Singapore Airlines flying it to Sydney.

Refugee board not swayed by U.S. deserter

◗ Ruling could lead to Joshua Key's deportation ◗ Key says he's hopeful federal appeal court will hear his case

Canada's Immigration and Refugee Board has rejected granting refugee status to Joshua Key, 32, a deserter from the U.S. army who says he is haunted by atrocities he saw committed by American soldiers in Iraq.

"I find that the claimant is neither a ... refugee nor a person in need of protection," ruled Ken Atkinson of the board.

He said that he still feels things will work out, although the negative decision surprised him. "Of course, I was optimistic and had high hopes," he said.

In its decision, the refugee board noted the U.S. is a democracy with human rights protections.

"The issue in this application is whether there is a serious possibility that the claimant would be persecuted, if he returned to the U.S.A. or that, on a balance of probabilities, he would be subjected personally to a risk to his life or to a risk of cruel and unusual treatment or a danger of torture, if he returned to the U.S.A.," wrote Atkinson.

"I find that there is adequate state protection in the U.S.A. and the claimant has not taken all reasonable steps to pursue the available state protection."

After fleeing to Canada, Key wrote The Deserter's Tale, in which he described seeing two civilians decapitated and their bodies desecrated.

"There were American soldiers kicking the heads around like soccer balls," Key wrote.

Reluctant recruit

- Joshua Key told the board he joined the Army after a recruiter told him he would be assigned as a bridge builder and not deployed in combat.
- His unit entered Kuwait on April 10, 2003. Within weeks, he was in Ramadi, Iraq, where he said his duties included conducting night-time raids of Iraqi homes.

WHY SANTA CLAUS IS DEAD

Other people's money

DAVID DESCÔTEAUX

This week, millions of Americans disgusted with politics demanded change. They voted for candidates who promised to reduce spending and force government to live within its means.

Don't ask me how we're going to create jobs," said Rand Paul, a newly minted U.S. senator since Tuesday, before a Kentucky crowd last April. "It's you who will create jobs. If we get out of your way."

In Toronto, mayor-elect Rob Ford spent his career in city council denouncing his colleagues' spending and privileges. "Partying with taxpayer money is over," repeated the football coach during his campaign.

In England, David Cameron's new government is putting the state on a diet. He plans to eliminate 490,000 public jobs by 2015. A majority of the population supports him.

The era of bailiffs

Historically, politicians have always played Santa Claus, but those days are over, according to Éric Duhaime, co-founder of the Quebec Liberty Network, a grassroots movement that promotes greater freedom of choice and individual responsibility. "It's fun to play Santa, giving gifts and receiving thanks from everyone. But the kind of politician we need now, in Quebec and elsewhere, is a bailiff. Someone who will break down doors, twist arms, and go get the cheques."

This kind of work is less glamorous. Ribbon-cutting ceremonies on bright, sunny days will be rare. It's not surprising that fewer and fewer people want to go into politics, according to Duhaime. "Historically, politicians were used to hearing, 'Thank you so much, kind sir, thank you for giving us roads and arenas. Thanks for putting it on my children's credit cards.' Today, the credit cards are maxed out."

The task will be difficult and unpleasant, but the mission is noble: Serving the needs of the people instead of the whims of well-connected interest groups. Taxpayers have had it with seeing their money used to bail out millionaire bankers, launch wars or placate unions.

In New Jersey, Gov. Chris Christie is so popular that many see him running for the U.S. presidency one day. His message: Let's stop making short-term decisions that dig us ever deeper.

"This year, many government employees will get an 11 per cent raise. It's going to cost New Jersey taxpayers $300 million, while thousands of these taxpayers just feel lucky to still have jobs. It's insane." Santa Claus is dead. And that's a good thing.

David Descôteaux is a freelance economic journalist and an associate researcher at the Montreal Economic Institute.

Porcelain Veneers

In our image conscious society, a dazzling "picture-perfect" smile has the power to improve lifestyle, advance employment, and strengthen personal relationships. In other words, a dazzling smile can change a person's life!

For many people, porcelain veneers can make that happen. Veneers are semi-translucent shells, as thin as a contact lens that can be permanently bonded to a front tooth or teeth. They can make almost anyone's smile more attractive and have been proven to last for many years. So if your front teeth have spaces between them, are broken or chipped, have unattractive fillings, are stained or discoloured, or are crooked; porcelain veneers could be the best way for you to improve your smile.

Great changes have taken place in the technique and use of porcelain veneers in recent years. These changes are the result of better porcelains being developed by dental researchers, together with major improvements in the ability to bond porcelain directly to the teeth. Beautiful, luminescent porcelain veneers look much better and hold up much longer than their predecessors (plastic veneers), or direct composite restorations. In short, porcelain veneers look very natural, are extremely durable, and maintain their colour.

A new, improved smile can be designed and put in place with just a few dental appointments as a result of the advances in cosmetic dentistry that make it possible to correct disfigured and broken teeth, fill gaps and brighten smiles. Afterwards, maintenance on your part is simple. Just floss and brush as you normally would.

Porcelain veneers can be one of the best ways to have a more attractive smile, instantly! In fact, you might even think of porcelain veneers as a "face lift" for your teeth. When a photographer says "smile", porcelain veneers can help yours to be it's "picture perfect" best.

Besides being one of the most conservative cosmetic procedures, porcelain veneers are very strong, and they resist staining and cracking. Take proper care of your porcelain veneers, and they can last you for many years to come.

Yours for better dental health,

Dr. David J. Halpin

▶ Billy Connolly

5 MINUTES WITH:

Billy Connolly is a Scottish comedian, musician and actor. He appears at the National Arts Centre Monday.

Are Canadian audiences more or less likely to get your jokes?
Oh, more likely. There's a massive British and Scottish influence in Canada, both from immigration and from television, and so I get the benefit of that. Mind you, I've never had a problem anywhere. I just kind of bombard my audience with what I've got and they either like it or they don't. And if they don't, well, tough, that's all there is!

You once joked that they could nuke Glasgow and it wouldn't make any difference. In August, they awarded you the freedom of the city. Did anyone bring that up?
Well, Glasgow can take a joke, thank Christ. You see, in Glasgow, we are blessed by having Edinburgh as our neighbour. Edinburgh is stunningly beautiful and Glasgow is not. We've never looked on ourselves as a beautiful place, and the average Glaswegian looks on Glasgow as a funky place. It's not pretty, but it's got a certain beauty. I love it, I must say.

Freedom of the city comes with certain ancient privileges, right?
Yes, I can graze my cattle on Glasgow Green, which is a park down the centre of town on the edge of the Clyde. I'm kind of tempted to get a sheep and go and take it there just to see. I have to defend Glasgow if it comes under attack, which I have for many, many years with gay abandon. And if I'm ever put in jail, I'm entitled to a cell of my own. Isn't that cool?

For your DVD, Journey To The Edge Of The World, you toured Canada's Far North. What impression did it make on you?
I'll tell you the most staggering thing about Canada: There's no bugger there. It's f—ing empty! We were flying for hours one day over forest and I said to this forest ranger guy, "Finally, I understand what being lost means." On the fourth hour flying over this forest I thought, holy s—, if you're lost in there, you're properly f—ing lost, and he says if you're lost in there, if we don't find you in the first 70-odd hours, we're talking 20 years. By that time your family's moved away and you're speaking f—ing wolf.

Re: I looked at a girl ... and liked it (Nov. 2)

OTTAWA. I find Jessica Napier's immature comments to be deplorable. As a Canadian citizen, I should not have to be faced with such discriminating characterizations of my sexual preference. Let's reiterate — should a girl look at another girl and "want to get with her," there would not be anything creepy about it. Period. Having a same-sex crush on a close friend is also not "weird" — it's a wonderful compliment. Homosexuality is a perfectly natural sexual desire. To classify same-sex desire as being "creepy" or "weird" is absolutely wrong and disrespectful. MIKE ARTELLE

TORONTO. I went into reading (the column) with curiosity as I find the topic interesting, and think the subject of same-sex crushes, whether platonic or not, needs to get out there more to help those experiencing them to feel OK about it, but wound up disappointed. While it's fine to be clear about (a same-sex crush) not being a sexual feeling, is it necessary to imply that if it was a sexual feeling, it would be "creepy?" I find this offensive. Same-sex sexual attraction is not "creepy." It's totally normal and can even happen to people who label themselves heterosexual.

Metro Minute at One World film fest

For more than two decades, the World InterAction Mondiale has been raising awareness about social issues through its annual One World Film Festival.

The festival returns Friday through Sunday at Library and Archives Canada at 395 Wellington St. with 10 new documentaries over three days. "Documentary films have the power to expand what people know about the world they live in," said festival co-chair Carolyn Elliott-Magwood.

"The films at this year's festival touch on a wide variety of topical issues, from Canada's engagement in Afghanistan to the worldwide decline of the honey bee, and what that means for our environment as a whole." TRACEY TONG

Monsters director is out to show how you can make a sci-fi blockbuster without breaking the bank ◆ Alien invasion flick being compared to District 9 ◆ Raises issues about American national security and border security issues

▶ Monsters is a sci-fi film about octopus-like aliens taking over Mexico.

Creating movie Monsters for less

STEVE GOW
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Filmmaker Gareth Edwards is as confused as anyone about why Hollywood's special effects blockbusters cost millions of dollars to make.

"I'd love for you to ask that same question to (Hollywood producers) and say, 'Why is it so expensive?'" said the Emmy-nominated visual effects prodigy-turned-director recently in Toronto. "Essentially it's a guy on a computer in a room doing it. Who's getting the $10 million?"

With his thriller Monsters, Edwards is defying convention with his own sci-fi blockbuster that features a Mexico overrun by enormous octopus-like aliens. Impressively slick, the first-time filmmaker has proven that you can craft incredible effects that don't rely on an Avatar-sized bankroll.

"I genuinely don't know (how much it cost)," admitted Edwards while insisting Internet rumors the price tag was as low as $15,000 US are false. "We all got paid a wage so there's no way it could've been done for that, but probably the budget could've been close to that in terms of what was spent on-screen. It was a very low budget."

Monsters isn't only attracting attention for its cost-effective effects however. Comparing the film to District 9, critics are taking note of the movie's political subtext regarding American security and border policies — a distinction Edwards quickly downplays.

"It's really much more a case (that) I wanted to do this monster movie but I wanted it to be real and so you pull from real world situations," said Edwards. "(But) there's a lot of little parallels in there and I'm very happy for them to be there because I didn't want to make a film that was (just) entertainment."

Editing woes

▶ Garth Edwards

Largely improvised, Monster director Garth Edwards had a difficult time distilling Monsters into a watchable movie:

Big cuts. "We had about a hundred hours worth of stuff and the first cut was over four hours," said Edwards. "We stuck a big sign over the edit saying '90 minutes' because ... about one and a half hours into any movie, no matter how good it is, I do that thing where I look at my watch."

News in brief

Take one look at Pharrell Williams' resume — or scroll down his Wikipedia page — and you'll see that he's accomplished a lot.

But Williams, who is one-half of the genre-bending production duo The Neptunes and frontman for rap-rock trio N.E.R.D, said there's still so much more he wants to achieve.

"I'd love to work with Eminem. I'd love to do it," the 37-year-old Grammy winner said in a phone interview Tuesday from Seattle. "It just hasn't happened yet."

REAL-LIFE SURVIVAL TALES ON THE BIG SCREEN

In Focus

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Wikipedia defines survival as "the struggle to remain alive and living." Next to that definition should be a picture of Aron Ralston, the poster boy for survival at any cost.

His name may not ring a bell, but his remarkable story will make you wonder how far you would go to stay alive. You see, Ralston is the American mountain climber who was trapped by a boulder for five days in May 2003 and was only able to free himself by amputating his own arm.

His story is told in unflinching detail in 127 Hours, starring James Franco. The film is so intense some audience members have suffered panic attacks and lightheadedness.

The same can't be said of Alive, the 1993 film about a Uruguayan rugby team stranded in the Andes, who, once their rations of wine and chocolate ran out, were forced to eat their deceased teammates to stay alive.

Based on real events, the facts of the story are gut-wrenching, but as New Yorker critic Anthony Lane pointed out "most people know the story already; everyone began to titter with anticipation whenever one of the characters said he felt hungry."

The ghoulish humour some audiences found in the film's story of survival was echoed in Lane's review when he wrote that the film, "solemnly wring(s) a message of togetherness from the horror. Come closer to your friends than ever before, the movie says: have them for lunch."

Less known than Alive's cannibalistic rugby players but just as compelling is Touching the Void, another true-life endurance drama.

The movie's lesson? Never go mountain climbing.

Roger Ebert called the story of Joe Simpson's slow, painful climb from the bottom of a crevice to rescue "the most harrowing movie about mountain climbing I have seen, or can imagine."

Most of these movies have happy (or at least happy-ish) endings, but not all stories of survival end in triumph.

The anti-survival movie genre is alive and well, even if the characters usually aren't by the end of these films.

Into the Wild, the Oscar nominated story of an idealistic dreamer not up to the challenges of living on his own in the wilderness of Alaska and Open Water, the tale of a pair of swimmers who become shark bait, don't have the inspirational uplift of some of the other movies I've mentioned, but can be essays in courage (or stupidity, depending on your viewpoint).

▶ Touching the Void is a true-life story about a disastrous climb in the Andes mountains.

5 top numeral movies

127 Hours is about, well, the 127 hours James Franco's character spends trapped beneath a boulder while hiking in a remote canyon in Utah. Pretty self-explanatory.

Using numerals in titles can either be exact or add an air of mystery. 300, for example, could be about a perfect bowling score. But 9½ Weeks is about an affair that lasts ... 9½ weeks. And involves a lot of dessert toppings.

Here are five of the best movies with numerals in their titles — and it was very hard to narrow it down to just five, so you'll surely think of plenty others. Feel free to share them. We're not talking about spelled-out numbers, either, so Three Days of the Condor is out. Similarly, you can't just choose a sequel, tempting as it is to place Breakin' 2: Electric Boogaloo on the list.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

8½ (1963)

Considered by many to be Federico Fellini's masterpiece (Nights of Cabiria is my personal favourite of his), it won Academy Awards for best foreign-language film and for its costume design. It's hugely personal: a film about filmmaking, with the director at its centre, Guido (Marcello Mastroianni), functioning as a stand-in for Fellini himself. Full of fantastical imagery but also rooted in a specific reality, as Guido has a movie he must finish and a wife and various mistresses he must placate. In gorgeous black and white, Fellini weaves between the two so skillfully, you may sometimes wonder which is which. It's dreamlike and mesmerizing in a way that can only be described as Felliniesque. See it instead of Nine.

12 Angry Men (1957)

Precise and riveting in its depiction of the heart of man, the difficulty of compromise and the possibility of forgiveness. Sidney Lumet's film — his first feature — is based on a Reginald Rose teleplay, and with the action mainly occurring inside a jury deliberation room, it does give you the intense, even claustrophobic feeling of having front-row seats for a powerful play. It's all about the dialogue, and all about the performances, with a stellar cast led by Henry Fonda, Martin Balsam, Jack Warden and Jack Klugman. We never know whether the defendant in this murder trial is truly guilty; what matters are the prejudices and life experiences the jurors bring to the debate.

Great cast gives boost to weak script

Due Date
Genre: Comedy
Director: Todd Phillips
Stars: Robert Downey Jr., Zach Galifianakis, Danny McBride

If Robert Downey Jr. and Zach Galifianakis weren't arguably the two biggest stars in Hollywood right now, Due Date wouldn't exist. The script is clearly a generic road comedy about an expectant father and a wannabe actor racing to Los Angeles that never would have been produced without the two stars signing on.

Granted, they brought along The Hangover director Todd Phillips who clearly added some inspired gags and improv sessions (Galifianakis' pre-sleep ritual and Downey knocking out a kid are two of the biggest laughs in the movies this year), but the funniest moments all feel tacked onto a tired central structure that becomes tedious shortly after it begins.

The biggest problem is that the Phillips wanted to tug on his audience's heartstrings rather than just going for belly laughs. That's fine, but Phillips lacks Judd Apatow's touch with gentle drama, relying too often on the skill of his actors to get through wince-inducing monologues. Galifianakis and Downey Jr. are undeniably fantastic and almost elevate the project over a half-hearted remake Planes Trains And Automobiles, but not quite. Due Date is certainly funny and worth seeing, but just doesn't reach the comedic heights of The Hangover and that wasn't exactly a high bar to reach.

PHIL BROWN

Mega fun for young and old

Megamind
Genre: Animation
Director: Tom McGrath
Stars: Will Ferrell, Tina Fey
●●●½

With an assortment of pop culture references and some hilarious, clearly improvised voice work on behalf of its stars Will Ferrell and Tina Fey, Megamind is one of those rare family gems that win over both young and old.

The story of a bumbling but brilliant supervillain that reluctantly takes on the role of public defender after he regrettably defeats local hero Metro Man (Brad Pitt), Megamind may be a familiar premise (especially in the wake of Despicable Me) but director Tom McGrath (Madagascar) works the comedic elements smoothly and keeps the visuals exciting. He and the stellar voice cast are clearly having a good time and the energy rubs off ensuring this a flick to save the day.

STEVE GOW

Fair Game
Genre: Drama
Director: Doug Limon
Stars: Sean Penn, Naomi Watts, Sam Shepard
●●½

Doug Limon (the man fired from The Bourne Identity series) almost returns to form with Fair Game, a political thriller about Joe and Valerie Plame Wilson. Valerie worked for the CIA before being ousted and ruined by the press after her husband Joe published an article in the New York Times deriding the fast-tracked Iraq War. Limon attempts to streamline the ugly truth into a tense thriller and while the pacing definitely works, too much detail has been sacrificed.

PHIL BROWN

2001: A Space Odyssey (1968)
Speaking of dreamlike, Stanley Kubrick's sci-fi meditation on the nature of evolution lulls you in with its haunting minimalism, only to shake you up with some startling image or idea. Life aboard the spaceship seems mundane, redundant ... until the HAL 9000 computer speaks, suggesting something is awry and building tension. He could open the pod bay doors, but why should he? He doesn't have to. The interiors and visuals look low-tech in retrospect, which provides an intriguing contradiction with the strong musical choices, from the sweeping Blue Danube to the formidable Thus Spoke Zarathustra. A film you have to see more than once, just to let it seep into your brain a little more.

28 Days Later (2003):
Danny Boyle turns his eye for vivid imagery and his feel for heart-pounding pacing toward a classic genre: the zombie flick. His depiction of a post-apocalyptic London after a virus outbreak is jaw-dropping in its severe simplicity. Cillian Murphy awakens from a 28-day coma to find nothing and no one in this typically bustling city. But the stillness is soon broken by attacks from the twitching, hissing, flailing infected. Purists may balk, since these aren't your typical lumbering, mumbling zombies, but they're just as harrowing in their own way. 28 Days Later is so well-written, though, it makes you care just as much about the living as the (un)dead.

Plan 9 From Outer Space (1958)
This is probably where I should have chosen The 400 Blows. But Ed Wood's low-budget sci-fi schlockfest is universally considered the worst film ever made — and that makes it kind of awesome in its own way. A classic within the director's ignominious canon, Plan 9 is a marvel of shoddy effects, continuity errors, bad writing and worse acting — and Bela Lugosi's in it, even though he didn't exactly intend to be. But it's delightfully awful, giddily so, especially as depicted in Tim Burton's sorta-true biopic Ed Wood, starring Johnny Depp as the oddball director. The plot? Something to do with angry aliens mobilizing the dead to take over the planet. Just sit back and enjoy the UFOs dangling from visible wires.

Balfour finds time for the things he loves

Experienced, yet young, actor battles aliens in the disaster epic Skyline ◗ Six Feet Under star says effects laden film really about people banding together

CHRIS ALEXANDER
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Though his name my evade overuse in most domestic households, actor Eric Balfour's chiseled face has been on screens for over a decade.

The edgy performer, model and musician has been a presence in everything from HBO's hit TV show Six Feet Under, to the blockbuster (and bloody) 2004 remake of The Texas Chainsaw Massacre, to the current Stephen King series Haven. And yet mysteriously, Balfour has yet to break through to the mainstream.

The actor hopes to rectify that problem with his leading role in The Strause Brothers' big budget sci-fi shocker Skyline, a bizarre, FX driven global disaster epic that sees mankind falling prey to hordes of invading alien hypnotists.

The Strause Brothers, Colin and Greg, also directed AVPR: Alien vs. Predator — Requiem, and have created visual effects for more than 50 movies.

But while the visual razzle dazzle may be the hook, Balfour believes it's the human element that gives the picture its essential spine.

"There are wall to wall effects in this film," says Balfour.

"But it's really a much more intimate story, something that takes the scope of an epic genre movie and uses that to tell a story about a group of people in a survival situation."

Earlier this year Balfour also headlined Dinoshark, another genre potboiler with a considerably more — ahem — modest budget than that of Skyline's. But it gave Balfour the chance to work with a living legend, producer Roger Corman.

"Roger is iconic, I couldn't resist the chance to meet him," says Balfour of the near mythical mogul.

"Is Dinoshark the proudest moment of my career? No, not really. But we did things on that movie that I would never have gotten away with on a big Hollywood film. And to learn philosophies about filmmaking from Roger firsthand was incredible."

Whether or not Skyline pushes Balfour into the higher tier spotlight he so clearly belongs in, the tireless, always enthusiastic artist is keeping busy with a myriad of projects, including directing, writing and continuing with his other love, music.

"Look, when people in my world say they have no time to do the things they want to do, that's nonsense," he urges.

"If it's something you want to pursue or express, you gotta make the time. And I do. I always will."

On the road yet again

Country music megastar Kenny Chesney will be on the tour circuit next spring with the Zac Brown Band, Billy Curington and Uncle Kracker

Kenny Chesney is returning to the road with a vengeance.

Country music's top touring draw of the decade announced yesterday that he will co-headline nine stadium dates next year with the Zac Brown Band, pairing two top road acts.

Chesney had sold more than a million tickets a year for eight consecutive years before taking 2010 off. He filled his time by making two movies and completing his new album, Hemingway's Whiskey, which debuted at No. 1 in September.

The singer admitted to feeling the lure of the road while away, but the four-time winner of entertainer of the year from both The Country Music Association and The Academy of Country Music thinks the time off will improve the show his fans see next spring and summer.

"What's going to be different for me is the new music," Chesney told The Associated Press in an email. "When we hit the stage this spring, we'll be doing a lot of songs from Hemingway's Whiskey, and our show needed that change. It's going to allow me to really make the set different than it's been and make the show more spontaneous."

MATT SAYLES/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Kenny Chesney is set to headline nine stadium dates.

Spontaneity is something the Zac Brown Band is known for. The six-piece band from Atlanta won the 2010 Grammy for best new artist and is nominated for both entertainer of the year and best new artist at next week's CMA Awards. It has also been one of the hardest touring acts since its breakout two years ago, and its live act has drawn rave reviews.

The stadium tour kicks off March 19, 2011, in Tampa, Fla., and runs through the summer. Billy Curington will join Chesney and Brown on those dates and Uncle Kracker will open eight of the stadium shows. Chesney will announce more arena and amphitheatre dates later this year for what he says will be his biggest tour since 2006.

"I really miss certain things about the road, like the first note of every night and the energy that's exchanged between the stage and the crowd," Chesney said. "I'm really fired up to feel that. That moment is what drives me and what I look forward to." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Audio antiques

To every technology there is a season. In the world of audio, digital continues to supplant analogue.

There were two important announcements recently. The first was from Sony, which said that after 31 years, it is ceasing production of the cassette version of the Walkman.

The first model, the TPS-L2, went on sale on July 1, 1979. It sold 30,000 units in the first three months, 10 million in its first decade and more than 220 million in total.

But the Walkman has been eclipsed by MP3 players. Sales of the iPod and its iterations are well north of a quarter of a billion units.

But Sony hasn't given up entirely. Production has been outsourced to a Chinese company, which means if you still really want a cassette Walkman, you can get one. But why would you?

The second announcement came from Panasonic. After 38 years, it is phasing out the Technics SL-1200 turntable. DJs and radio station engineers treasure them for their near-indestructible direct-drive motor, pitch control, tone arm tracking and bass that is heavy enough to absorb a nuclear bomb without allowing the record to skip.

Alas, with technological advances, sales of the SL-1200 are a mere five per cent of what they were 10 years ago.

My advice? If you're into vinyl renaissance, buy one while you can. It'll be the last turntable that you'll ever need.

Blair Underwood lands on alien territory

Known for his roles in the 'as-real-as-it-gets series,' actor Underwood boldly braves the world of sci-fi

On The Event, Blair Underwood plays newly sworn-in President Elias Martinez, who meets with crises he could never have imagined when he took office.

One problem he inherits is from out of this world: What to do about extraterrestrial aliens who crash-landed in Alaska in 1944. While an unknown number of them remain at large to this day, 97 are imprisoned as Top Secret detainees.

How would the American people react on learning of the aliens' existence? And do some of these creatures pose a threat to human life?

Such questions dog Martinez, who is just one of many characters in this multi-strand thriller.

Airing Mondays at 9 p.m. ET, The Event has the action-adventure rambunctiousness of 24 and a time-shifting narrative that smacks of Lost.

But Underwood recalls that, when he was first approached by its producers, "My major question was, 'How authentic do you see this show?' They said, 'We want to keep it as realistic as possible.'"

It figures Underwood would ask.

During a quarter-century of roles, the 46-year-old actor has tried to keep at least one foot on the ground with performances that feel real, going back to his breakout role as smooth but headstrong attorney Jonathan Rollins on L.A. Law. He subsequently starred on the medical dramaCity of Angels, joined the cast of Sex and the City its final season and set off sparks with Heather Locklear on their short-lived airport drama, LAX.

Whatever it is, Martinez seems to have it, even as, radiating dignity and leadership, he wrestles with a crisis he still can't fully grasp.

Most recently, he has focused on the mysterious disappearance of Sophia

Maguire (Innes), the leader of the detainees with whom Martinez had met to discuss their release.

Martinez was born in Miami to Cuban refugees, but his Afro-Cuban heritage is just one of many details that make up the character.

"Race comes into play in every aspect of life, whether we acknowledge it or not," he says.

"But the conscious effort I make as an actor is, 'Just let this man be a person.'"

Underwood's interest in acting was triggered at an early age.

"I'd watch the kids on TV and think how cool that must be," he recalls. "I wanted to know, 'How do I get in that box like those other kids?'"

He studied musical theatre at Carnegie Mellon University.

Then, at 23, arrived on the red-hot L.A. Law as it began its second season in 1987.

"Most of us in life, especially in my industry, just want a shot," Underwood says, "and when I got that opportunity, I wanted to make the most of it. I still carry that with me.

Duff's role earns props from pals

Hilary Duff says she scored some points with NHLer husband Mike Comrie by landing a guest spot on the subversive collegiate comedy Community.

"He was so excited when I told him I was doing the show," the former Disney teen queen said in a conference call this week. "So many guys in my life - like a lot of my guy friends - love the show, and I totally got respect for doing it.

"They're so used to me and everything that I do that they don't really care anymore - until I told them I was doing the show and they were like, 'No way! We DVR that at home! We love it, we've watched it since the beginning.'

"It was fun to get to see their reaction."

The 23-year-old Duff guest starred in last night's episode of the sophomore sitcom, which airs on NBC and Citytv.

She played the acid-tongued leader of a pack of mean girls making life miserable at Greendale, the show's hapless Colorado community college.

"It was fun for me to get to play a mean girl because it is so different from anything I've ever done before," Duff said. "Danny Pudi's character in the show really brings out her weakness, chinks in her armour, you know? And I thought that was really fun to play, to get to be tough, but you do see how weak she is." Embrace the bad guy

Rhys Ifans, the new Spider-Man villain, is good at being wicked
Star loving his new bad guy roles

▶ British actor Rhys Ifans poses as the character Jimmy Hook on the set of new television movie Neverland in Genoa, Italy.

Welsh actor Rhys Ifans can't stop smiling about being the bad guy.

He has scooped the role as the villain in the reboot of the Spider-Man franchise; he's earning acclaim for his lead performance as a notorious drug dealer in new British film Mr. Nice; and he's shooting for an epic new TV movie called Neverland, where he gets to play Peter Pan's nemesis, Captain Hook.

"I'm constantly suppressing a very wide smile," Ifans told The Associated Press.

The 43-year-old actor is not allowed to talk about his role as the baddie in the web-slinging comic book adventure, but said he's "very, very excited about it.

"It's a great script, great director and the money ain't bad," he said.

Ifans may be best known for playing as Hugh Grant's oddball roommate in 1999's Notting Hill.

Recent credits include Pirate Radio and Greenberg opposite Ben Stiller.

Ifans will be starring opposite American-born and British-raised Andrew Garfield, who is taking over as Peter Parker.

"It is quite cool this one, to have Spider-Man and his villain both from the U.K.," Ifans said.

Ifans spoke to the AP on the set of his latest project in Dublin — Neverland, a two-part television movie that will air next year.

Written and directed by Nick Willing, the fantasy aims to explain why Peter Pan ended up in the magical world where he never grows up and how Hook went from bad to worse.

"It's every boy's dream to play Captain Hook," said Ifans. "We've all grown up with that myth and legend so big boots to fill but a lot of fun."

▶ Sweet potato chocolate cake packs a healthy punch.

Cake can be healthy too

This moist and scrumptious chocolate cake is infused with the goodness of sweet potato. It makes a uniquely delicious end to a special dinner and is a source of fibre and vitamin C.

Sweet Potato Chocolate Cake

Preparation:

1 Preheat oven to 180 C (350 F). Over a saucepan of boiling water, place frozen sweet potatoes in a steamer basket and steam for 12 minutes or until very tender. (Make sure there is a gap between the top of the water and the bottom of the steamer basket.) Place sweet potatoes in a large bowl and mash using a potato masher. Add chocolate and let stand for 2 minutes or until melted, then stir to combine. Let cool.

2 In another large bowl, beat butter and sugar until fluffy. Beat in eggs, one at a time, and beat in vanilla. Beat in sweet potato mixture.

3 In another bowl, whisk together flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Stir into chocolate mixture until combined. Scrape into parchment paper-lined 3-l (13-by-9-inch) baking pan and spread evenly in pan. Bake for about 25 minutes or until cake tester inserted in centre comes out clean.

Ingredients :

- 1 bag (454 g) frozen sweet potato chunks
- 180 g bittersweet (70 per cent) chocolate, chopped
- 150 ml unsalted butter, softened
- 175 ml packed brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 10 ml vanilla
- 500 ml all-purpose flour
- 5 ml baking powder
- 2 ml baking soda
- Pinch salt
- 75 ml chocolate chips
- 75 ml toffee bits
- 50 ml chopped pecans

4 Immediately after cake comes out of oven, sprinkle chocolate chips over top of cake and let stand for 2 minutes. Spread evenly, then sprinkle with toffee and pecans. Let cool. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

The history and origins of cake

A fundraising bake sale at the college where Krystina Castella teaches gave her the incentive to write a book about cakes from around the world. International students brought Korean, South African, Indian Eastern European and Middle Eastern cakes for the event. "I discovered that cake is tied to every culture in terms of celebration," says Castella, 43, a professor at Art Center College of Design in Pasadena, Calif. "Where other foods are specific to certain countries I discovered in my research there are cakes in every single culture." What is enduring about Castella's A World of Cake is that it is not only a cookbook, but also a historical lineage of traditional cakes from region to region. Readers will find cake history as well as information on sweet delicacies from such far-flung places as Africa, the Indian subcontinent, Latin America, Eastern Europe and Asia. From the research for her previous baking cookbooks, Castella had many contacts across the world and was able to communicate by e-mail to ask for recipes. "People ask me if I travelled to all the countries to sample the more than 150 recipes in the book, and all I can say is, 'I wish.'"

Spezza sends Isles packing

- Star forward has goal, three assists for Sens as they improve to .500
- Elliott solid in net with 28 saves
- Gonchar, Hale, Kelly also score

SEAN KILPATRICK/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ Peter Regin celebrates as teammate Jason Spezza's shot defies Islanders goalie Dwayne Rolson.

Jason Spezza scored and added three assists to lead the Ottawa Senators to a 4-1 win over the New York Islanders Thursday night. Sergei Gonchar, David Hale and Chris Kelly, with an empty net goal, also scored for the Senators.

Matt Moulson scored the lone goal for the Islanders.

The Senators also got a solid outing from Brian Elliott, making his ninth straight start, as he stopped 28 shots.

Dwayne Roloson made 26 saves in net for New York and struggled early on.

SENATORS	ISLANDERS
4	1

With the win, the Senators (6-6-1) are .500 for the first time this season, while the Islanders (4-7-2) dropped their sixth straight.

The Senators opened the scoring midway through the first as Spezza found Gonchar all alone coming down the wing to beat Roloson shortside.

Ottawa then scored two goals less than three minutes apart in the second period.

Hale, scoring his first as a member of the Senators, caught Roloson in the shoulder and the puck just dropped behind to cross the goal-line. Roloson then mishandled Spezza's wrist shot and slammed his stick in frustration as Ottawa jumped out to a 3-0 lead.

With Chris Neil in the box, the Islanders took advantage of just their second power play of the game when Moulson beat a sprawled Elliott to make it 3-1 early in the third.

Elliott came up huge late in the period with the Senators short-handed as he stopped breakaways by both Blake Comeau and Frans Nielsen.

The Islanders had a great chance early in the first after Ottawa's Zach Smith was given a five-minute major for boarding, but New York managed just two shots on the power play.

$7M

Value of an option the Colorado Rockies turned down on left-hander Jeff Francis of North Delta, B.C. The 29-year-old was 4-6 in 20 games.

The Boston Red Sox kept designated hitter David Ortiz by exercising a $12.5-million US club option Thursday, and the San Francisco Giants declined a $9.5-million option on World Series MVP Edgar Renteria.

Teams had until midnight ET to exercise options under the new rules agreed to by the commissioner's office and players' association in September. Under the fast-track timetable, free agents such as Cliff Lee, Carl Crawford and Jayson Werth can start negotiating with all teams Sunday, the sixth day after the World Series.

Ortiz wanted a new multi-year contract, but the Red Sox didn't want to make a longer commitment to a player who turns 35 in two weeks. While he made his sixth AL all-star team, he got off to his second straight slow start. Ortiz finished with a .270 average, 32 homers and 102 RBIs.

Baseball legend Anderson dead at 76

Reds fans were taken aback when Sparky Anderson showed up in Cincinnati for his first day as a big league manager; an unknown taking over baseball's first professional team.

Sparky who?

Really?

By the time he was done, this man with the shock of white hair and schoolboy nickname would produce a mighty list of achievements that featured three World Series titles — including crowns in each league — and a Hall of Fame entry on his resumé.

Anderson, who directed the Big Red Machine to back-to-back championships and won another in Detroit, died Thursday from complications of dementia in Thousand Oaks, Calif. He was 76. A day earlier, his family said he had been placed in hospice care.

"He was a good guy," former Tigers pitcher Jack Morris said, choking up over the news. "Baseball will have very few people like Sparky. He was a unique individual. He was a character with a great passion and love for the game."

He never tried to overshadow his teams, giving his stars great leeway while trying to stay in the background. At Anderson's request, there will be no funeral or memorial service.

Anderson was the first manager to win World Series titles in both leagues and the only manager to lead two franchises in career wins.

His Reds teams featuring Pete Rose, Johnny Bench and Joe Morgan that won crowns in 1975 and 1976 rank among the most powerful of all time. Led by Kirk Gibson and Alan Trammell, Anderson won with the Tigers in 1984.

Anderson's win total of 2,194 was the third highest when he retired after the 1995 season, trailing only Connie Mack and John McGraw. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 Listen to what friends and relatives have to tell you today, especially if they are giving you advice on your finances.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 You've had your doubts about a relationship for some time but those doubts will be eased considerably today. There may be a few tears but they will most likely be tears of joy.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 You cannot think of everything yourself and anyone who gets annoyed with you because you have overlooked some small detail must be reminded of that fact today. If they don't like your efforts they are free to link up with someone else.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 The urge to start something new is extra strong at the moment but because Venus, planet of emotional and material values, is moving retrograde you must make sure you will be able to finish what you begin.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 Family issues are once again looming large and you will have to deal with a relative who does not seem to be making a very good job of controlling their emotions.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 2 You cannot control each and every situation you find yourself in and the sooner you accept that fact the sooner you will be able to move on from your current negative situation.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Venus, your ruler, is going through one of its retrograde phases, which means you should stop trying to call the shots and let others take the lead.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 Are there forces outside our everyday reality that look over and protect us? You have often felt invisible hands guide your actions. Let them guide you in the right direction again today.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 You don't lack for strong opinions but you do sometimes lack for tact in expressing them. It's not so much what you say that matters as the way in which you say it. Say it with love.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Just be yourself and wonderful things will happen. You may spend more than you can afford on luxuries you don't need but in the greater scheme of thing that's a minor sin.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 You will get all the encouragement you need today. Friends and family and work colleagues will go out of their way to praise you and encourage you to make more of your talents.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 A relationship may be going through a tough time at the moment but stick with it. While Venus, planet of affection, continues to move retrograde others will act in strange ways. SALLY BROMPTON
